SUFFERING WOMANHOOD

Too much effort cannot be made to bring to the attention of suffering womanhood the great value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the diseases of women, and perhaps nothing is more effectual than the testimony of those who have been cured by it. Such an one is the wife of General Barringer of Winston, N. C., and we quote from the General's letter as follows "Dear Mrs Pinkham: Please allow me to add my testimony to the most excellent medicinal qualities of your Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Barringer was treated for several years. I sent her to Richmond Va, where she remained for six months under the treatment of an eminent physician without any permanent benefit. She was induced to try your medicine, and after a reasonable time commenced to improve and is now able to attend to her business and considers herself fully relieved." SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1885.

It is reported that Representative Cox of New York, is tired of Congressional life and would like the Turkish mission.

Ex-Gov. Crittenden, of Missouri, desires a foreign mission and it is suggested that he be gratified if he will only take Missouri's other distinguished son, Frank James, with him and forget to bring him back.

Young Republican Clubs are being formed in many places this Spring. Such organizations ought to be encouraged as they afford the young men an excellent opportunity to become familiar with the political situation.

The Democrats in the Indiana Legislature passed a mild resolution concurring in the sentiments of Mr. Cleveland's inaugural address, and telegraphed it to Washington, and then wanted the cost paid out of the State Treasury.

Mr. Springer and Mr. Townshend have waited upon Secretary Manning to present the name of J. H. Oberly for Collector of Customs at Chicago. They said they did not want to hurry matters, but wanted Oberly to be had when the time came for a change.

The silver men at Washington declare that the fight on the silver question at the next session of Congress will surpass any contest that can take place on the tariff. They say that the issues are already clearly defined, and that the "goldbugs" having control of the Treasury Department will drive silver to the wall if they can.

It is said that Mr. McDonald, whose cabinet boom was a failure, will not accept any position in the gift of the Administration, but will be a candidate for the U. S. Senate in 1887. Gov. Gray will also be in the field and will probably receive the support of Vice-President Hendricks who would not be pleased to see McDonald in the Senate.

A society for the suppression of slang has been organized among the female operatives of a large factory in Cleveland. If members of the society using a slang word or phrase are fined, and the proceeds thus obtained are devoted to some charitable object. An organization of this character might be advantageous outside of factories.

We regret, says the Hartford Courant, to see the name of the Hon. W. W. Eaton on the list of narrow-minded Democrats who voted against the Grant Retirement bill. It will recall to many good people in Connecticut the record of Mr. Eaton, compared with that of General Grant, and will revive unpleasant memories over which the mantle of charity had been thrown, and which Mr. Eaton is very unwise to revive by his last public act as a Representative in Congress of the First Congressional District.

These are some of the things which make Dakota proud. It has 2,500 miles of railway, more than any one of twenty old settled States. It has 2,060 school houses, more than any one of fifteen States. It has 275 newspapers, more than any New England State except Massachusetts, or any Eastern State except New York and Pennsylvania. In the number of post-offices it ranks above twenty-three States and Territories, and pays more revenue to the Post Office Department than any one of thirty-two States, and it has a population as large as Nebraska or Connecticut, and nearly twice as large as Vermont or Florida.

The Commercial substantiates our statement that the Democrats will indorse Secretary Manning's idea of civil service reform in removing a competent clerk in order to appoint a personal friend of "Boss" Kelly, and intimates that many more appointments of the same character may be expected. There is no doubt of it. The friends of President Cleveland and his Cabinet will be provided for, but it should not be attempted under the cloak of civil service reform. The removal of an old and efficient clerk simply to make room for a man who is "exceedingly well known in sporting circles throughout the country," will not have a tendency to strengthen public confidence in the reform pretensions of the new administration.

Some of the people of Chicago are evidently firm believers in the advantage to be derived from having a "Mascot" in the family. An interesting case has been going on in the County Court for the guardianship of a little girl. This is Fredericka Lenze, the 7-year-old daughter of Emanuel Lenze, who killed his wife and then himself lately. No less than six different people have filed petitions for leave to adopt her. She is a remarkably pretty and intelligent little girl, and those who have seen her are not very much astonished at her popularity. But it is now said that, in addition to her intelligence and pretty face and person, many people believe she is a "Mascot," and has the faculty of locating gold mines. The judge went so far a few days ago as to make a decree giving her to one party, but, seeing that there was a perfect rush of people in better circumstances to get possession of her, he revoked the decree and waited to see who would apply, so that he might do the best possible for the little waif. A decision in the case was finally reached, Judge Prendergast awarding the child to a well-to-do German couple.

Three or four years ago a story appeared in the newspapers to the effect that a quantity of diamonds had been smuggled into New York concealed in the handles of shaving brushes. Among those who read the story was a young man named William P. Williams, who at the time resided in Buffalo, N. Y., and who is at present in business in Chicago. Among the chattels appropriated by Mr. Williams when leaving his parents' home at Buffalo was a shaving brush, hitherto the property of his father. It was an ordinary article, with a white bone handle. One Sunday morning recently, when Williams was engaged in the usual service of lathering his face preparatory to a clean shave, he heard something rattle inside the handle. He drew the attention of his room-mate, and at the same time related the story of the smuggled diamonds, which he had read in the papers. Finally the handle was crushed, and two good sized diamonds were found. All the shaving brushes in that district are being smashed, but no further finds have been reported.

Mr. Curtis's New Departure.

For many years George William Curtis has been known as the uncompromising foe of political bosses and machine politics. At party conventions, on the stump, in the columns of Harper's Weekly, he has steadily insisted that the boss and the machine must go if government of the people is to remain. No man in the country has insisted more earnestly or more frequently upon this proposition. Mr. Curtis has come to be known in our politics as the leader of the political reformers. In season and out of season he has cried and spared not, pleading for the extermination of the boss and the smashing of the machine.

But Mr. Curtis—it would seem—has remodeled his political convictions. The delegate who, after fiercely denouncing Democracy on the floor of the Republican National Convention, hastened to enlist under the Democratic banner, now proceeds to delight the hearts of the bosses and the machinists by eulogizing that notorious boss and machine manager, Dan Manning. From the leader in Harper's Weekly on President Cleveland's Cabinet we extract this gem of discriminating praise:

Mr. Manning is known in the politics of New York as the chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and is identified with the best men and soundest policies of his party. He is also most favorably known in business circles for his excellent judgment, intelligence, and firmness. He is, moreover, a personal friend of the President, who, upon going to assume immense public duties in a place and among persons generally unknown to him, has naturally wished to have near him, and among his responsible advisers, not only a man well fitted for the official position, but an intimate and trusted personal friend. Mr. Manning is placed at the head of one of the great patronage departments, and the one which is usually considered the most important and powerful. It may be safely assumed that the Secretary of the Treasury, selected under the circumstances that we have mentioned, will faithfully observe the principles of the President.

This obviously is a first rate notice of Mr. Manning. Another first-rate notice of the same person was made several years ago by an administrative reformer answering to the name of Tweed. The first-rate notice was drawn from him by an investigating committee. Here is an extract from it:

Q. State more particularly your relations with the Argus? A. The Argus was a Democratic journal; a man named MANNING was a reporter for it. MY RELATIONS WITH HIM BECAME VERY INTIMATE AND FRIENDLY; sometimes they desired an appropriation put in the tax levy: all appropriations originated in the lower House, and while the Democracy were in power I had control of the Ways and Means where action in the matter emanated; when the Republicans were in power I generally had control of it also.

Q. In what way did you control the committee? A. MANNING would hand me an item he wanted put in the tax levy. I would hand it to the chairman and tell him I wanted it done; then MANNING came to ME—was that otherwise he would have to pay for having the item put in but I secured its insertion without any expense to them by that means I got their support. I was always ready to oblige them.

Q. This Democratic journal supported you and was paid for it in this way? A. That was the understanding.

Q. Did any of your ring write editorials in that paper? A. No sir. MANNING WOULD BRING ME ARTICLES SOMETIMES THAT HAD BEEN WRITTEN, I think he would have put in whatever I desired. I never tried, because it was never necessary. If it had been necessary I would have exercised the power. . . .

Q. Can you give me any idea of the amount that was put into the tax levy during your time, on behalf of the Albany Argus? A. I COULDN'T, BUT IF I COULD I WOULDN'T DARE TO; IT WOULD BE FRIGHTFUL IN AMOUNT.

The Manning above referred to by William M. Tweed is identical with the Manning now eulogized by George William Curtis. Mr. Curtis is pleased with the selection for the Treasury Department of the man whose relations with Tweed were "very intimate and friendly."

Now let Mr. Curtis proceed to explain that any remarks he may have let fall looking to a purification of the Civil Service was tentative and that on mature reflection he is convinced that the spoils system is the only hope of the Republic.

The Distress in Great Britain.

[Boston Journal.]

The free trade papers here and in England are trying to make the people of this country believe that the condition of those who depend upon the manufacturing industries is more deplorable here than it is in England. We have already quoted the remarks of the London Times on this subject, and have called attention to the assumption of our free trade organs at home designed to make the people believe that those engaged in the manufacturing industries of the country would be in better condition, have more continuous employment and a higher average of wages if they were upon the same basis as the people who depend upon the manufactures of Great Britain for food and shelter.

It has been a hard winter, and there may yet be a season when there will not be full employment and satisfactory wages. In our cities there has been more distress than in our manufacturing towns, because the smaller industries have felt the pinch more severely than the larger ones. Yet those who read the newspapers of both countries would not think of measuring the privations of the manufacturing people or the poor in our cities with the actual and general distress among the same classes in England. A London clergyman has recently published a letter in the Methodist Times of that city, which presents the condition of its poor to us. Great as are the evils of the factory system in the North of England, the want of that system makes the condition of the poor in London much harder than it would be. The worst factory is more wholesome than the houses in which the poor are compelled to toil by day and sleep by night.

The hours of labor are longer and the wages lower than in the factories. "The poor," says this writer, "are treated in many cases with a cruelty and a brutality for which I know of only one just punishment—the cat." He says that seven pence, or about fourteen cents, is the price paid for making a child's knickerbocker suit, while the price for making children's pinafores is from eight to eighteen cents a dozen, and skirts are made as low as a cent and a half each. At a recent conference regarding industrial remuneration, Mr. Frederick Hudson said:

"Ninety per cent. of the actual producers of wealth have no home they call their own beyond the end of the week; have no bit of soil or so much as a room that belongs to them; have the precarious chance of weekly wages, which barely suffice to keep them in health, and are separated by so narrow a margin from destitution that a month of bad trade, sickness or unexpected loss brings them face to face with hunger and pauperism."

The Methodist Times, the London paper referred to, asks:

"Is it known that half of the children of the Metropolitan School Boards belong to families living in one room? Is it known that in some districts sixty per cent. of the children go to school without breakfast, and that the cry of 'over-pressure' is the outcome of under-feeding? Do our readers know what hunger pangs are? A short time since numbers of intelligent English people were condoning murder on the ground that the murderers were driven to that course by the pangs of hunger. Yet these agonies are being endured by hundreds of our fellow creatures, and, alas! by little children. The streets of Birmingham have lately been the scene of melancholy doings, for, hundreds of able-bodied men have marched through them, carrying flags of distress and appealing to the authorities to find them work."

We do not believe that such shocking revelations as the above can be found among the wage classes in this country; certainly not where intemperance is not the cause of abject poverty. And yet Great Britain is the most wealthy country in the world.

The senatorial contest in Delaware is growing in interest. Every day brings new recruits to the State capital, and politicians representing every clique and faction of the Democratic party are working up the interests of their respective candidates. Just who will be Mr Bayard's successor is a question of so grave uncertainty that very few venture to look beyond the first ballot. The friends of Representative Charles B. Lore are exceedingly hopeful, and not without cause, as it is admitted by very many that his promotion to a seat in the Senate would be assured were it not for the office which he holds now, and the expense that a special election for a Representative would entail upon the State. A caucus will be held on Monday night, and the present indication is that the first ballot will result about as follows: Gray, 11; Lore, 11; Martin, 8. If all the forces shall be concentrated upon Lore and Gray nearly all of Martin's men will vote for the former, and thus give him an easy victory. If, however, a fourth man should be brought into the field, in the person of Judge Wootten, it would be impossible to prophesy the result. It is generally thought that the Legislature will not come to an agreement in caucus, but that the question of senatorial succession will ultimately be fought out upon the floor.

There are already numerous signs of dissatisfaction with the new administration in Democratic circles. One of the leaders of the two Ohio factions left for home with the threat that the Ohio Democrats would at the next election play the Folger game against Cleveland, as the best way of showing this New York administration that it could not afford to snub the Ohio Democracy.

MANUFACTURERS.

Manufacturers should appreciate the indemnity which life insurance furnishes. They realize quite as forcibly, we think, as any class of men, the ups and downs, and also the uncertainties connected with all human affairs. They know from experience the personal attention necessary to a successful prosecution of their business. This should guide them in the money value of their lives. The loss (in a pecuniary sense) to the family can, in a measure, be provided against by life insurance. The policies of the Connecticut Mutual under the "new contract," can be sold for cash, if a policy holder should desire. See policy.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.
Conductor Mellus Says Something of Interest to All Travellers.
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb 22, 1884.
Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.
Dear Sir: I have used your medicine, called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that it is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of that kind. Respectfully, W. S. MELIUS
60 Harrison Street.
TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 22d, 1884.
DEAR SIR:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind Sick Headaches. I thought it was due to impure Blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.
A. DERREVERE.
DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every State, as the following letter from Millville, N. J., will show.
MILLVILLE, N. J.
Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.
DEAR SIR:—I have been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief, then forced and almost given up in despair of ever recovering health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence. MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA.
As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY
has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N.Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

Entertainments.

Norombega Hall.
Thursday, March 19, 1885.
Just what the people want and what they are waiting for.
The Great 50 Mile all America
GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE.
The whole country sifted for entries and the most celebrated men secured.
To substantiate this sweeping assertion don't fail to observe the large field of famous runners, positively sure to be present.
The manager in presenting this new pedestrian treat to the people of Bangor and vicinity, claims to know pretty near what they want for an attraction, and after much difficulty has secured a field of long distance runners that very seldom meet in a race of this kind, and I think the leaders of sports will admit when they look at the entry list, that rarely if ever so many noted men were pitted against one another in America, where this particular kind of sport is very rare.
For full particulars see small bills.
To accommodate the whole people the GRAND START will take place at 2.30 P. M. prompt.
Admission, - - - - 25 cts.
Children under 15 years, - - - 15 cts.
Season tickets admitting holders to race at any time, - - - 50 cts.
These tickets are not transferable. They will be sold at D. Bugbee & Co's, Monday, 16th, and will be kept there until Thursday, at 12 o'clock noon, after that they will not be on sale.
The Maine Central R. R. has kindly consented to sell half rate tickets from Oldtown, Orono and Ellsworth on that day. This is a good opportunity for the people of these places to combine business with pleasure.

For a SPRING TONIC it has no equal. Every bottle warranted exactly as represented.
READ THE FOLLOWING NEW TESTIMONIALS:
What a well known Citizen of Veazie Says of it.
10 years I have been a sufferer from most severe difficulties of the stomach and digestive organs, sometimes making me very sick, and it was during one of these that I procured a bottle of BELL'S SARSAPARILLA, hoping to obtain some relief from it. The medicine gave me the greatest relief if not a permanent cure. I gave it a thorough trial and it is now 8 months since I stopped taking it and I feel how much it has done for me.

News About the Capital

The Hazen Court Martial—A Sensation in the Court.

WASHINGTON, March 13. In the Hazen Court Martial, to-day, counsel for the defense caused a sensation in the court by a statement in connection with which the examination of Hudson would prove that the articles published in the Chicago [illegible] and Washington Capital, [illegible] Hazen and giving information to the public of his having written a letter to the Secretary of War, throwing the blame for the tragic termination of the Greely expedition on that official, has been inspired by the Secretary of War, and that they would trace them to his desk and his hand.

A copy of the report of the Secretary of War for 1883 was presented to the Hazen Court Martial this morning and evidence was produced showing that the same had been received by the Chief Signal Office. This report contained a memorandum dated Sep. 19, 1883, stating that the Secretaries of War and the Navy had decided it impracticable to send another expedition to the relief of Greely that year. Capt. Mills was examined in regard to the presence of General Hazen at the signal office Dec. 11th, 1883, and the prosecution rested the case.

The defense called Capt. Mills as the first witness. In answer to the question as to whether a copy of the above memorandum is on file in the Signal Office, he said he did not think such a copy is on file there, but on the date of the decision the Secretary of War gave him [a] [illegible] graph copy of the memorandum. His recollection was that a copy was intended to be given the Associated Press for publication as an answer to numerous inquiries on the subject that came to the Secretary of War.

Edward Hudson, editor of the Capital, was called by the defense. His attention was called to [illegible] published in that paper March, 1885, stating that Gen. Hazen had written a letter to the Secretary of War throwing the blame for the termination of the Greely party on that official, and stating further, [illegible] that Hazen asked leave to go South in order to be absent when the letter came into the hands of the Secretary. Witness was asked if he wrote the article [illegible]

The Judge Advocate objected on the ground that it was irrelevant and immaterial.

In replying to this objection Judge Maury, counsel for the defense, created a sensation in the court by stating that he intended to trace the article to the Secretary of War.

He said "we propose to trace, by good and well connected proof, this paragraph back to the source that inspired it. We propose to follow, by a chain of well connected links, this paragraph and one in the Chicago Tribune [illegible] to the door of the Secretary of War's chamber, follow them to his desk, follow them to his hand and show that the War Secretary, who has charge [of] an officer of the army with violation of duty by [illegible] criticism of his [illegible] in public print, that the Secretary of War sat at his desk and [illegible] this paragraph [illegible] The court [illegible] the Chicago Tribune [illegible] despatch in which [illegible] the report of the [illegible] of the accused.

[It ap]pears that the accused had himself been assailed by whose hand he could not tell. We will show it by the hand of authority, that the hand that drew the charge and specifications against him was the hand that [illegible] the publication that [illegible] his honor [illegible]

The Judge Advocate said that the defense, before he could be allowed to [illegible] his plea on mitigation, must admit the offence. He added, no matter what [had] been said or written, Gen. Hazen was not justified in seeking the public press to assail his superior. He also denied that the Secretary of War had anything to do with the publications. The court went into secret session to consider the objection of the Judge Advocate and adjourned.

A Brewer correspondent writes: The semi-monthly sociables have come to be red-letter hours to the young people of the Chapel Association, Brewer, and like wine they grow better with the days. The last one Thursday evening was one of the best of the series. The programme opened with a selection by a quartette. Miss Ware followed with a select reading and Bertie Boden with a recitation, guitar solo by Miss Ware, song by Mr. Ray, a most comical impersonation of the "Animated Sunflower" by six misses and an animated and laughable dialogue of many parties "A Poet in search of a Wife." The interest was very lively to the end, the audience [illegible] their delight by recalling the participants almost invariably and sometimes a second time. Great credit is due Miss Lena Parstow for the success of the evening, the programme being gotten up by her talent and industry. The public greet these entertainments with a full house every night and of course the financial results are satisfactory.

MEETING OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

The last meeting of the City Government was held last evening at City Hall, all of the members being present. In the Upper Board a large number of tabled petitions came up and were referred to the incoming board. Some business of minor importance was transacted. The most important was the passage of an order authorizing a loan of $60,000 to be secured to pay some of the city's indebtedness falling due in May. Alderman Simpson introduced a resolve thanking the Mayor for the able performance of his duties, and Alderman Vose introduced a resolve extending thanks to the City Clerk. The Common Council concurred in all matters acted upon by the Aldermen. In this Board Councilman Lynch introduced a resolution thanking President Charles L. Getchell and a resolve was also introduced thanking Clerk Otto F. Youngs for the able and impartial manner in which they performed their duties.

The City Council after adjournment repaired to the Windsor Hotel where a fine oyster supper was served together with other refreshments under the direction of Landlord Chase. The gentlemen did ample justice to the supper and after it concluded happy speeches were made by City Treasurer John L. Crosby, Aldermen Coltmore, Toblu, Simpson, Vose and Conners, and Councilman Getchell. Each spoke of the very friendly relations that had existed between all the members and regretted the separation. At a late hour the party adjourned.

AMUSEMENTS

Presentation of "Patience."

Another large house greeted the presentation of "Patience" by Bennett & Moulton's Comic Opera Company last evening, and it gave general satisfaction. While not making particular mention of any of the characters it is enough to say that the acting was very nice and the singing up to the standard for the week. The costumes worn were above the average and the general presentation entirely satisfied the audience, many saying that it was the best for the week.

TESTIMONIAL OF RESPECT

Passed by the Board of Trustees of the Insane Hospital to the Memory of the late Hon. J. T. Hinckley

At the quarterly meeting of the Trustees of the Insane Hospital the following testimonial to the late Mr. Hinckley was passed and a copy of it ordered to be sent to his family, also published in the Kennebec Journal and Bangor DAILY WHIG AND COURIER:

As members of the Board of Trustees of the Insane Asylum, we have heard with profound sorrow of the death of our esteemed colleague, Hon. J. T. Hinckley. In his death we keenly feel that personally we have been bereft of a friend honored for his noble qualities, and much endeared to us by his genial disposition and unvarying kindness in our official intercourse and that the Board has lost one of its most useful members, one who was always wise in counsel, prompt and efficient in discharging the duties of his office.

With pleasure we bear testimony that no one among us more fully appreciated or more earnestly sought to alleviate, so far as possible, the condition of the unfortunates, whose interest we all have so much at heart.

We would proffer to his stricken wife and children in this hour of sore affliction, our tenderest sympathy, while we commend them to the loving care of Him who only can truly console and who "hath Himself borne our grief" and "carried our sorrows."

Mrs. E. J. FORSEY, } Committee
E. A. THOMPSON, }

Passed by Bangor Division, S. of T., on the Death of Hon. Alpheus Lyon.

At the regular meeting of Bangor Division, No. 14, Sons of Temperance, held in Stetson's Hall, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted as presented by their committee:

Whereas, Death has again entered our fraternal circle and taken away from the reach of mortal brotherhood and its many kindly offices one to another, our worthy and much honored brother, the late Judge Alpheus Lyon, therefore

Resolved, That though in sorrow our minds bring our loss anew before us, and realizing as we do the vacancy caused in our foremost ranks thereby, yet we feel that the words of Holy Writ well apply to our brother wherein it saith, "And he walked with God and he was not for God took him," and again, "As for me I will behold Thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I wake with Thy likeness."

Resolved, That by the death of our brother our memories are carried back to the birth of this Division and the commencement of its noble labor in the cause, twenty-seven years ago this winter, when our honorable Brother Lyon became its first presiding officer, and, though outliving nearly all the honored brothers who took the stand with him, yet never has he wavered in his love for the cause, in purity of motives or fidelity to its principles, thus making himself to us "as a shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Resolved, That in the death of our venerable brother the prayer was kindly granted, for when his star did "set at life's close" it set as doth the morning star which goeth not down behind the darkened west but melts away in the brightness of heaven.

Resolved, That our charter be draped in token of our loss for the space of three months, also that a copy of these resolutions be entered on our records, that a copy be sent to the relatives of the deceased and one also sent to the daily papers of this city for publication.

Respectfully submitted in L. P. and F.

OUR ORONO LETTER

A Very Pleasant and Enjoyable Masonic Social at the Hall—Particulars of the Affair—A New Masonic Hall Proposed—A Singular and Serious Accident

Our correspondent (C. [illegible] A.) writes: One of the most enjoyable of socials was that held in Masonic Hall last Thursday evening under the auspices of Mechanics Lodge F. & A. M. About 250 persons were present. A few minutes before eight o'clock supper was served and all the participants were loud in praise of the sumptuous character of the repast. The tables were ornamented with handsome dishes of apples and raisins and the pyramids of frost [illegible] cake, etc., etc., were most temptingly displayed among the dishes of meats and viands. The [illegible] part of the supper was prepared and furnished by the sisters and lady friends of the lodge and both were a credit to the [illegible] skill of the [illegible] wives of Orono. After supper the gentlemen indulged in cigars. About nine o'clock the audience was called to order and the programme which consisted of dramatic sketches, recitations, solo and chorus singing, began [illegible] with a chorus by Misses Annie [illegible] Eva Ritter, Cora and Lulu Dresser; Miss Bertha Bond playing the accompaniment; recitation by Miss Annie Douglass; the Song "I stood on the Bridge at Midnight" by Mrs. Z. [illegible] Dill, she playing her own accompaniment, was very sweet, next in order were [illegible] by Rev. Thomas Stanley [illegible] They were very good [illegible] were received with applause; recitation by Miss Annie Moshier; song, "Tim McGee," by W. H. Colburn, in costume, Mrs. Emma Colburn playing the accompaniment; in response to a hearty encore Brother Colburn favored [illegible] with [illegible] Nell [illegible] by Miss Marie [illegible] The evening's entertainment concluded with [illegible] song by Miss Eva Ritter. We think the large party present will agree with us in pronouncing it one of the most social and thoroughly enjoyable affairs of the season. Brothers McKenney, Hall and Chase were the efficient committee on refreshments and Brothers J. C. Wilson and [illegible] on entertainment.

The Masons of Orono are talking very strongly of building a hall of their own. A committee has been appointed to interview Messrs. Crosby and Mills who were recently burned out and see if they can make suitable arrangements, and all build together in the spring. If such arrangements can be made there will undoubtedly be raised a building which will be a credit to the town as the Lodge is in quite a good financial condition and several of the interested and active brethren are ready to contribute liberally in its behalf.

A painful and almost serious accident occurred Thursday evening, about half past seven o'clock, as Mr. and Mrs. George [illegible] were driving up Main street. Mrs. [illegible] clothing was found to be on fire caused by some bags of waste matches in the bottom of the pung catching fire. A lady who resided near by happened to look out of the window, saw the accident, and immediately summoned the gentleman who succeeded in putting out the flames. Mrs. [illegible] was quite severely burned and but for the prompt assistance rendered she might have burned to death right on the street, her clothing being all made of inflammable material.

His Son's Wife.

[From Cassell's Family Magazine.]

When, after a prolonged resistance on the part of the ratepayers, the School Board at length invaded the suburb of Abney, N. W., and erected schools superior in every respect to those already existing in the parish, there was no one whom the change affected more than it did old Reuben Sparrow, the master of the Free College for Boys. His pupils had never been numerous, and now they dropped off one by one, till the embittered and sorely-mortified man was compelled to resign his post.

Fortunately he had saved enough to live on, and so, having no need to go in search of fresh employment, he was able to devote the best part of his time to the studies in which he had formerly delighted.

He was now a man of nearly seventy, with broad, though rounded shoulders, and a face that would nowhere pass unnoticed. Deep furrows scored his forehead and bracketed his thinly closed mouth; sparse white hair was brushed [illegible] about his head; beneath heavy brows peered out the pedagogue's eyes, [illegible], shrewd, suspicious. He was quick to find fault, impatient of ignorance, slow to trust, hard to please, but—as there [illegible] in every nature—he was capable of strong, self-forgetting affection, and the wife, who for forty years had been his faithful helpmate, often said that she had never had an unkind word from him.

Reuben sent for the doctor, a young man in the first flush of his profession, [illegible] gravity and dignity, who, after examining the patient very carefully, seated himself to write a prescription in ominous silence. Reuben watched him at once anxiously and distrustfully.

"What dost think of her, young man?" he asked, at last.

"She is in a very critical state, and ought not to be left. Is there no one to share the nursing with you?"

Reuben threw up his head sharply. "There isn't a woman in the place but would be proud to be called to the bedside of my Mary, but I won't trust any of them. She and I, we've always done for one another, and I can't have a meddlesome stranger in now."

"Have you no daughter?"

"None but my son's wife, and she's naught but a [illegible] fool. Used to be [illegible] girl, and learnt to dress the outside of her head instead of the inside, [illegible] fine name like a lady's, but don't know who Julius Cæsar was, and calls the [illegible] of a pudding the bottom because it's the lowest—pooh!"

A sort of grim smile flickered across the sick woman's face as he made this last sweeping charge against his daughter, but it only lasted a moment.

The old woman's lips moved. [illegible] he said, with eyes fastened apprehensively on the [illegible] face.

"I am afraid so," said Mr. Walters, gravely. "I wouldn't refuse help in the nursing if I were you. You might regret it when it is too late."

"Let me alone, young man!" retorted Reuben fiercely. "D'ye think I'm no better than a silly woman? I've got a good head on my shoulders, and my wife's more to me than she is to any one else. Tell me what ought to be done, and I'll do it."

"Very well, Mr. Sparrow," said the doctor coldly; "but remember that you are warned, and if sleep overtakes you just when you are most wanted, you will be responsible for the consequences."

But the next morning, when he called, the son's wife was already installed at the patient's bedside, and Reuben, with immense knowledge and superiority, was passing on to her the instructions received by him the previous day.

"A weak girl, like her [illegible] fool! can't do it without sticking a stack of hair [illegible] her eyes. Stand aside—now see!"

He put his arm under the sick woman, and [illegible] breathing was quick and difficult, [illegible] cleverly raised her into an easier position.

The doctor came forward a little curious to see the disparaged daughter-in-law. In outward appearance, she answered fairly accurately to Reuben's description, having a figure [illegible] moulded, [illegible] lacking, and a face shadowed by a [illegible] of black hair brought down to the eyes. Her clothes were unsuitably [illegible], and on the table lay a number of [illegible] books, apparently taken [illegible] Reuben's dictation. But she had a [illegible], intelligent smile, and bore her father-in-law's strictures with a modesty and good temper which augured well for her readiness to submit to instruction and pick up the little devices of nursing on which a patient's comfort depends.

But Mary Sparrow was much worse. Reuben, who turned his penetrating [illegible] upon her face, and the doctor felt cheered by neither.

"Mind your own work, young man, and your patient. How is she?"

Mr. Walters did all he could for the sick woman, and then, leading Reuben out of the room, broke to him as gently as he could the certainty that his wife could live but a few hours. Reuben would not believe it, and gave vent to expressions of savage contempt for the whole race of doctors.

The next day poor old Mary died, and the stricken husband shut himself up to be alone with his grief. Even at the funeral he would not exchange a word with the many kindly mourners who gathered round the grave.

The following morning, however, he sent for his son and daughter-in-law, and made arrangements to live with them and their little boy.

"Well, Luke," he said, more gently than usual, "you did your best for her. You're worth more than I thought. We'd better live together."

"Of course, father," said his son heartily. "We'll try to make you comfortable, and Gwen'll try to take mother's place."

"Keep a sensible tongue in your head," said Reuben, with slow scorn. "Your wife's a well-meaning gal, maybe, but as ignorant as a baby. Mother's place! [illegible] My Mary's place!"

He leant his heavy head on his hands, and could not speak again.

"Nobody couldn't help puttin' up with an old man like that," replied Gwen, whose grammar was hardly as genteel as her name. "Never you fear, Luke; we'll get on all right."

But here in Gwen was too sanguine. From the time she and Reuben became the inmates of the same little house, her every action was harshly criticised, if not severely condemned. Her management of the house was invariably compared at every turn with that of her mother-in-law; her ignorance became the source of daily complaint; her [illegible] flighty manner the theme of [illegible] lectures.

Nothing but admirable patience and good temper, and real humility that accepted his judgment as better than her own, could have enabled the girl to persevere, as she did, in her determination to please the old man. In deference to his wishes she simplified her style of dress, put her black hair tidily off her face, and discarded all jewelry, save her wedding ring and a brooch given her by old Mary. Sarcastic and unkind as was Reuben's tone in speaking to her, she undoubtedly profited by his fault-finding, and, after a time, she discovered that Luke was right in saying his father's bark was worse than his bite. More than once, when some small domestic difficulty perplexed her, Reuben's watchful old eyes perceived it, and she found herself, at the same time, snarled at as a fool, and helped out of her quandary.

Again, the old schoolmaster took very kindly to his grandson, and Gwen, who was keenly conscious of her own want of education, was ready to put up with much churlishness to herself, for the sake of getting the boy taught by Reuben, whose learning inspired her with profound respect. Often when she dusted his book-shelves, where Horace, Virgil, Cicero, Thomas à Kempis, Shakspeare, one or two works on education, and a little old-fashioned volume of Bacon's Essays, and Locke's "Conduct of the Understanding," stood side by side in friendly tolerance of one another's contents, she would scan their titles and read a page here and there, wishing she had had more schooling, and that Peter might grow up "book-wise."

One day Reuben caught her at it.

"Put the books back!" he exclaimed peremptorily. "All the years we lived together, the old woman never so much as opened a book of mine, and here's you, a gal that can hardly spell her own outlandish name, poking into them, spoiling 'em, and wasting your time!"

"I wasn't hurtin' 'em, father," said Gwen; but unluckily she had laid his favorite Shakspeare 'good face' downwards on the table, and the old man broke out afresh:

"What's the use of trying to make anything of you? Surely any fool 'd know [illegible] to lay it so! Get along! I'll put the shelf right myself; never you touch 'em again."

"Very well, father," said Gwen; "but I was only thinkin' o' Peter, and wonderin' if p'r'aps some day you'd teach 'un what's in the books."

"Well, well!" said Reuben, somewhat mollified, "he's a good little chap, an' sharp enough too. He reminds me of Luke when he was a little 'un, but he hardly comes up to his father. Luke's got a first class head, if only he'd stick to steady work and not take up with inventions that never come to any good. He's a fine lad—he ought to have married a woman of breeding."

Poor Gwen winced, for of all the shafts in Reuben's quiver of abuse, this was the one which wounded her most cruelly. The sting of the words lay in their partial truth, for she knew that her kind, clever young husband might have made a better match. And yet she had loved him so dearly, and strove so hard to be worthy of him! It vexed her, too, to hear Reuben speak so slightingly of his inventions, for, as a matter of fact, the young engineer had sold the patents of various small labor-saving contrivances for considerable sums. Only in one case had he failed, and it was hard that Reuben should seem to remember that so much better than his successes.

Gwen delighted in her husband's work, and rather than let him be disturbed by domestic troubles, played out all her woman's tact in the endeavor to make it appear to him that the fault-finding to which Reuben sometimes subjected her, even in his son's presence, was merely the froth of [illegible] good understanding.

She little imagined that this view of the matter was Reuben's own, till one day, to her astonishment, a neighbor remarked:

"Old Mr. Sparrow thinks a great deal of you, Mrs. Sparrow, doesn't he? He drops in now and again, and tells us what a good manager you are, and how comfortable you make him. He says you are wonderfully thoughtful for such a young woman."

Gwen could hardly answer for surprise, but the discovery that Reuben praised her behind her back encouraged her greatly, and she tried harder than ever to improve, not only in her management of the house, but in speech, style and manner.

"You are becoming quite a lady, Gwen," said Luke, one evening, when she flushed with pleasure, and Reuben gave a grunt of curious significance, which Gwen chose to interpret as an expression of assent.

"Some day, father, I'll speak quite correct—quite correctly, I mean."

"I hope so," said Luke, so eagerly that [illegible] looked quickly up at him, and perceived the strange excitement in his eyes. "I hope so," he repeated, drawing a deep breath, "for I believe I am going to make my fortune, and that would be a lift up in the world for us all."

Reuben's face assumed its most sceptical expression.

"You ought to be showed [illegible] my boy. Nothing but steady and straightforward work [illegible]."

"And isn't it straightforward work to plod away at the elements of invention for years?" said Luke, warmly. "To get to know every discovered application of science to mechanics, so as to be familiar with one's tools, as it were, and then to effect original combinations? I don't want to boast, but my small inventions haven't failed, and I'm justified in believing [illegible]. I have invented an electric [illegible], which is bound to supersede all others."

"Ah, well, my lad, if the patent fetches you all the money it has cost, I'll congratulate you!"

Luke was accustomed to his father's incredulity, but to-night it seemed to affect him painfully.

"You must try to have faith in this, father," he said, endeavoring to speak calmly, "for I have made up my mind not to sell the patent, but to work it myself, to do which I must throw up my present employment and start an office on my own account. It may involve living on a very little for a while, but it means plenty in the end."

Luke's face was full of the exultation which proceeds from the sense of great achievement—the look of the man who originates, [illegible].

Gwen, with her wondering eyes, knelt beside him and drew his arm around her shoulder.

"You will help me, little woman, and put up with living on short commons for a time?" asked Luke, smiling at her.

Reuben's lips were pressed together as he sat and grimly watched the pair. At last he got up, and addressed them with deliberate, chilling contempt.

"Luke, you're a fool. Your wife's nothing else, so I don't say the same of her. But for a man who has one grain of sense to throw up a good place for the sake of [illegible], that's what I call the act of a fool, and I'm ashamed to have such a fool for my son. If you think I'm going to spend my little savings to keep you out of the workhouse, while you're waiting for a fortune that's to be made out of a [illegible], you're a fool for that, too. As soon as ever you can't pay up, I wash my hands of you, and quit the house. I shan't miss you, there's nothing you silly wife does for me I can't do better for myself."

Luke was in far too excited a state to take this quietly, and answered with a vehemence which Gwen sought in vain to soothe. There was a terrible scene, but at the end of a few minutes the [illegible] lay shattered before her.

The hardest time of her married life followed; for Luke, in a state of irritated determination to succeed, was sorely tried by the dilatoriness and procrastination of everybody whose approval and co-operation were necessary to the bringing out of his invention, and Reuben was more crossgrained than ever. It fell to Gwen's share to cheer [illegible] despair, to bear the [illegible] of her father-in-law's vituperation, and to make the diminished allowance cover the most necessary expenses.

At last the invention was given public trial, and from that day the tide slowly turned.

Nobody hurried to take up the invention, but still the capital to form a company was subscribed, and Luke felt his way grow clear and easy before him. A steady demand sprang up for the Sparrow [illegible], and the dividends rapidly rose.

Luke was in demand, [illegible], and on all sides manufacturers and speculators sent him orders for special inventions, offering him large sums if he could meet their requirements. Some of the requests were absurd, but [illegible] presented problems possible of solution, and the demand for his productions exceeding the supply, Luke's work was freed from [illegible] of the man who invents first, and finds his market afterwards—if he can.

At home, it seemed at first as if his success would widen, rather than heal, the breach between his father and himself, for Reuben grew more silent and moody as his son went up in the world. During the days of anxious poverty, while assailing Gwen with ceaseless reproaches, he had exercised much ingenuity in supplying the wants of the household, but now that the privations of the young couple were at an end, he chose to believe that they wished him dead and gone, and when Gwen told him one day that Luke intended to take a larger house, the old man broke out bitterly.

They were getting too grand for him, he said. The furniture which he and his old woman had bought when they married, and which he had brought with him to his son's, wasn't good enough for the fine new house, and he'd better betake himself somewhere else with them.

"Don't say that, father," said Gwen, "for wherever we go, you [illegible] shall have the old things in them."

"Oh, of course, the old things are good enough for the old man!" retorted Reuben, unreasonably. "You'll stow me away in the back rooms, and get new friends to suit your new furniture. No, no! I'll get a room somewhere, and have a woman come in to look after me. I'm used to neglect."

"But, father," said Gwen, patiently passing over a charge she had heard over and over again, "I want you more than ever, now. You see, Luke wants me to be fit to talk to the gentlemen who come to see him, so I thought perhaps you'd teach me out of the books, so that I may know something. Luke hasn't the time, and I don't feel as if I could get on without help. Besides, I can't bear to think of your living away from us now."

"You're talking nonsense," said Reuben. "I've not been so kind to you that you need set yourself against the parting."

"You are rare good to Peter, and when we were in a bad way, you stood by us, father. That's what I remember. I know your savings are a great deal smaller for what you did for us."

Then, rising from his chair, he fidgeted about the room. Then he sat down again, and watched Gwen's needle as it flew in and out of the work upon her knee.

"D'ye really mean you'd like to learn of me?" he asked, at last, doubtfully, "after all the hard things I've said to you?"

"I couldn't have gone on doing for you so long," said Gwen, encouraged by the gentleness of his tone, "if I hadn't known that you thought more kindly of me than ever you said. You didn't mean it, just now, when you said you were used to neglect."

"No, lass," said Reuben, taking her hand. "I'd no call to say such an untruth as that. You're a good gal, I'll teach you what you like."

After this, it was surprising how well Reuben got on with his daughter-in-law. Her intelligence delighted him, and he was never tired of boasting of the progress she made in history, arithmetic, grammar and geography. Not but what he often spoke snappishly, but the old constant friction was at an end, and past resentment quietly forgotten.

"It seems to me Peter and Gwen are running one another pretty close," said Luke, looking up from his papers with a smile, one evening.

"Bless you, no!" declared Reuben. "Peter is a sharp little lad, but he is nowhere beside his mother! She's one in a thousand, I tell you—one in a thousand!"
